Best Management Practices for New York State Golf Courses. 2014. A comprehensive online resource, <http://nysgolfbmp.cals.cornell.edu/> Best Management Practices have been established for golf course management and designed specifically for New York State to protect water quality, preserve and enhance open space, and reduce pesticide usage and runoff. In-depth guidance is provided by Cornell and private industry contributors in this guide. Grant wrote the IPM chapter and contributed to several others, and participated in the planning and oversight of the project.

Talking about Pesticides at Home and in the Neighborhood, module 6 in the Environment and Breast Cancer Teaching Tools for Change Kit. This module was created by R. Buoniello, J. Grant, J. Lamboy, and C. Orenstein, and features a slide set with narrative text. It promotes consideration and discussion of whether, when and how to use pesticides.

IPM Brochures (Jennifer Grant contributed to those listed)

- Get the Bugs Out, Safely! Markets the concept of IPM to general audiences.
- Grubs in Your Lawn? Describes grub management techniques and considerations for homeowners and is also useful for professionals. Updated in 2012.
- Answering your questions about Organic Land Care, A brochure to stimulate dialog between landscapers and consumers.

Online versions of Cornell University's Pest Management Guidelines

The NYS IPM Program sponsored the creation of online versions of three guideline books. Jennifer Grant supervised the technical consultant for the project, and coordinated input for the Commercial Turfgrass Guidelines. <http://www.IPMguidelines.org>. This project laid the groundwork for the current online versions of all Cornell guidelines.
